

at the New Theatre · 43 East Essex Street · Dublin 2

The Progressive Film Club is a voluntary association that organises the showing of progressive films from all over the world. Struggles for people's rights, for the rights of workers, of immigrants, of women, for national liberation and for social justice are some of the themes dealt with in the outstanding films we have shortlisted.

Screenings are on Sunday evenings at the New Theatre in East Essex Street. (Entrance through Connolly Books.) Tickets (€5) can be booked through Connolly Books, or bought before screenings at the box office.

Sunday 9 March 2008, 7:30 p.m.

I Saw Ben Barka Get Killed* (2004)

Written and directed by Serge Le Péron. A dramatised account of a notorious political scandal. The Moroccan intellectual and national liberation leader Mehdi Ben Barka disappeared in 1965 after being picked up by the French police in Paris. After his disappearance the official account was that nothing was known about the incident; but the involvement of the criminal world together with the French police tells a different story. In French, with English subtitles.

Sunday 16 March 2008, 7:30 p.m.

Fast Food Nation* (2006)

For the latest information. visit our web site at www.progressivefilmclub.ie.